SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO, SAN MATEO COUNTY, CAL., SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 18, 1915.

NO. 38

PROCEEDINGS OF THE CITY BOARD OF TRUSTEES

The city board of trustees met in adjourned session in the city hall last Monday evening.

The petition of Charles Fenger for the transfer of his liquor license from the Linden Hotel to 205 Grand avenue was denied.

Bids for constructing a concrete retaining wall, concrete steps and artificial stone sidewalks at the free public library were opened, and C. J. Lindgren, being the lowest bidder, was awarded the contract for the sum of $550.

The matter of installing furniture in the new library was discussed for some time and finally laid over for action on next Monday evening, when representatives of furniture companies will be present.

A resolution awarding the contract to grade and pave Grand avenue from the east side of Chestnut avenue to the east side of Mission road to F. R. Ritchie & Co. was adopted.

IMPROVEMENT NOTES.

Dredging operations at the harbor front are rapidly progressing. The space between the W. P. Fuller & Co. paint and Steiger pottery works is now being filled.

The work of grading and paving Grand avenue, from Chestnut avenue to Mission road, will soon start.

The building of the new section of the local electric railroad on Grand avenue, from Chestnut avenue to Mission road, will improve the service materially. When this work is completed, it is hoped a through car to San Francisco will be established.

SOUTH CITY MERCHANTS SOME BALL PLAYERS

WIN THEIR THIRTEENTH GAME BY 19 TO 9 SCORE.

Last Sunday the South City Merchants took their game from the San Francisco Athletics in easy fashion. Although it was uninteresting, it was the Merchants' game from the start.

The Athletics started trouble in the fifth inning by scoring six runs and taking the lead, 7 to 3. But that didn't last long, as the Merchants came back in the same inning and scored ten runs. It was a merry-go-round for the locals.

Fourcans, the hard-hitting right fielder, slammed the ball for a double with the bases loaded. The ball was hit so hard that the umpire ruled it off the field as it was knocked lopsided. He also banged two singles.

Catcher Chester Merritt has certainly improved his hitting eye. When he first signed up with the Merchants he was a regular "Casey," but now he seems to be the "Ty Cobb" of the team.

A. Maderas is playing a classy game at second, besides hitting the ball to all corners of the "flat."

The winning of Sunday's game makes it thirteen wins out of fifteen games played.

There will be no game Sunday, as the boys are going for a good time on the Magnolia Social Club's boat ride. The boys are in need of a good rest Sunday, to be in trim for the week after.

Fans are requested to watch for next week's news for a big surprise. The big series is coming. Watch for it.

FRED COSTIGLIOLA DEAD

Died—In this city, September 16, 1915, Fred, beloved son of Luigi and Maria Costigliola, brother of Louis, James, Amadeo, George, Marie and Irene Costigliola, a native of San Francisco, Cal., aged 19 years 7 months and 16 days. Friends and acquaintances are respectfully invited to attend the funeral to-morrow (Sunday), at 1 o'clock p. m., from his late residence, corner California and Eucalyptus avenues. Interment, Italian Cemetery.

Fred was an excellent young man; a hard, consistent worker with his father in cultivating crops of violets and vegetables in this city. He had many friends who will miss him and who are shocked by his untimely death.

ENTERTAINMENT FOR ST BRUNO'S CHURCH

On Saturday night, September 25th, an elaborate program will be put on at Green's Hall, San Bruno, when an entertainment will be given for St. Bruno's Church. The stage will represent a southern moonlight scene, and will be a beautiful setting for the old plantation melodies which will be sung to the accompaniment of an excellent orchestra, consisting of piano, flute, violin and banjo. At 10 p. m. the lovers of the light fantastic will retire to the upper hall, where a popular local band will strike up the favorite airs. A very large attendance is anticipated.

DEVELOPMENT ASSOCIATION ATTENDS ROAD CONGRESS

The following members of the San Mateo county development association have been in attendance this week at the tri-state good roads congress and the Pacific coast good roads congress in San Francisco, in conjunction with the Pan-American road congress and the interstate congress and American society of civil engineers: M. B. Johnson, Frank L. Eksward, W. J. Martin, F. A. Cunningham, Terence Masterson, E. M. Moores, D. G. Doubleday, J. M. Custer, Charles Beibel, H. C. Tuchsen and G. L. Perham.

HOSE CO. NO. 2 BENEFIT SHOW.

Subsequently, Blake finds the diamond in the possession of a money-lender. His fiancee, learning of the dead woman's attachment for Blake, quarrels with him.

A doctor discovers that Blake walked in his sleep and took the diamond himself while in that state. The diamond was stolen from Blake while he was asleep and never recovered. The thief confessed and died, and Blake and his fiancee were reunited.

Eugene O'Brien and Elaine Hammerstein in "The Moonstone" are to be seen at the Royal Theatre on Sunday, September 19th.

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT LENDS EDUCATIONAL EXPERT TO CALIFORNIA COMMISSION

The state commission of immigration and housing has successfully closed negotiations with the United States government for the loan of one of its leading experts in education, Luther Parker, industrial inspector of education for the Philippine islands. Mr. Parker assisted in the compilation of the Philippine public schools' exhibit at the Panama-Pacific international exposition, and during the past few months has been representing the Philippine bureau of education at the exposition.

Parker has been granted a year's leave of absence from his regular work and has been detailed to assist the state immigration commission in formulating a program of education for immigrants. The commission has made general surveys of the educational facilities provided for adult immigrants and has found the state woefully lacking in this respect.

Little or no provision has been made for teaching immigrants the English language, and no courses in citizenship training have been given except in one or two localities. The commission announced some time ago its intention to bring about a change in this situation, and it now plans to place California in the front rank among the states that are striving to do something of a constructive nature in aiding and encouraging the assimilation of America's millions of immigrant aliens.

The employment of Parker by the commission marks the end of several months' search for a man of technical and practical experience to take charge of this education work. Parker is a Californian, but has been in the bureau of education in the Philippines for fourteen years. He is a recognized expert in the teaching of the various tribes in the Philippines and has received a long and practical training in the teaching of English and civics to foreigners.

Mr. Brown had just thrust his feet beneath his desk and comfortably settled himself for a long afternoon's work when the office door opened and a woman canvasser entered with a satchel slung from her shoulder.

"An agent!" groaned Mr. Brown, as she advanced to his side.

"Good afternoon, sir," said she, politely. "Have you any objection to a lady blackening your shoes for you?"

"Indeed I have," responded Mr. Brown, emphatically.

"Oh, you mustn't mind a little thing like that," said she, reassuringly. "It's just a matter of business. I'm introducing a new kind of shoe polish and I can't sell any unless I demonstrate to you what it is, and I'll black your shoes in a moment."

"I can not permit it, madam," asserted Mr. Brown. "On no account will I permit you to do such a thing."

"I know a great many gentlemen do object to letting a lady do such work, and a great credit it is to their gallantry," said the lady sales agent.

"Oh, I don't mind that," asserted Mr. Brown, interrupting her.

"Why, what is your objection, then?"

"Mine are tan shoes."

Edmund had just begun to attend the public school, and had found a new friend, a child of whom Edmund's mother had never heard.

"Who is this Walter?" she asked.

"Is he a nice little boy?"

"Yes, ma'am, he is," replied Edmund, enthusiastically.

"Does he say any naughty word?" pursued his mother.

"No" replied Edmund, with emphasis, "and I'm not going to teach him any!"

CALIFORNIA DEVELOPMENT BOARD WILL GIVE DINNER TO MEMBERS AND SUPPORTERS

Invitations to a dinner and meeting, to be given Monday evening, September 20th, at the Fairmont Hotel, have been issued by the executive committee of the California development board to members, supporters and many interested in the development of the state of California.

The purpose of this dinner and meeting is to consider "After the Exposition—What?"

The state of California has invested a large amount of money in the exposition, and to secure the greatest results from this investment it is necessary that some organization, which is state-wide in its scope, undertake to supply the thousands of inquiries by people that visited the expositions and their friends for definite information about specific localities.

The California development board, being the only state-wide organization working in the interests of the entire state, naturally must undertake this very important work.

Most of the correspondence from intended settlers received at the governor's office, the state department, the commission of immigration and housing and other official bureaus is turned over to the board for reply.

The speakers for this dinner will include William J. Dutton, president California development board; R. B. Hale, Senator James D. Phelan, Robert Newton Lynch, Chester H. Rowell, Lawrence (Larry) Harris.

These speakers will discuss from a state-wide point of view how to realize on the expositions and the canal, and discuss practical plans for effective co-operation to secure better markets, better colonization methods, rural credits, good roads, how to standardize productive land values and the securing of complete reliable information from every county in the state.

It is the purpose of the California development board to lead in such phases of work that is state-wide and not undertaken by other organizations, and to co-operate with existing organizations in helping them to carry out that part of their work which is state-wide in its scope.

New stories of the late Civil War are always interesting. Here is one, found in an old journal of a southern family:

Among the officers in charge in Houston during the late war was General Griffin.

A freed man, Pomp, was one day conversing with the general, when he spied his former young master, whom he had not seen since the commencement of hostilities. Pomp ran to him and exclaimed: "God bless you, Mars Charles. I's mighty glad to see yer! How is de ole missis an' Mars John?"

After Pomp had finished his demonstration of joy, the general said: "Pomp, you need not call him 'master,' now; you are just as good as he is."

"What!" said Pomp, "me jus' as good as Mars Charles? No, sah, General Griffin. I may be jus' as good as you is, but I ain't so good as Mars Charles—no, sah!"

The manager of a factory recently engaged a new man and gave instructions to the foreman to instruct him in his duties. A few days afterward the manager inquired whether the new man was progressing with his work.

The foreman, who had not agreed very well with the man in question, exclaimed, angrily: "Progressing! There's been a lot of progress. I have taught him everything I know, and he is still an ignorant fool."

HOW TO SAVE ELECTRICITY.

A Few Simple Rules for Householders Whereby They Can Save on Their Electric Lighting Bills.

Familiarity breeds neglect, to paraphrase a familiar quotation, and especially so in the case of electric lighting. When the electric lights are first installed in the house a great deal of interest is taken in lamps and fixtures. The lights are usually installed in accordance with the best methods to insure good light at the greatest economy. After a few weeks the novelty wears off and the family forgets all about the electric lights, taking them as a matter of fact, and from then on they are too often neglected. Lamps and shades go undusted, and it takes but a tiny film of dirt and dust to impair the efficiency of the light. Lamps burn out and are replaced by any old lamp which can be found. Empty lamp sockets can be found in the "spare" rooms, and are usually not noticed until company comes; then there is a scurrying around to find lamps, or an old oil lamp has to be passed into service.

An illuminating engineer of the General Electric Company, in a recent discourse, gave the following helpful rules for caring for electric lights in the home to secure the best light efficiency at the greatest economy:

Dust lamp globes and shades as often as the furniture is dusted, or at least once a week.

Keep a supply of unused Mazda lamps, of various sizes, in the house. Don't wait until the lamps are broken or burned out before securing new lamps.

Don't keep empty lamp sockets about the house. Keep all sockets filled with the proper size lamps.

When a lamp burns out, or is broken, don't replace it with the first lamp available. For instance, a 20-watt lamp should not be replaced with a 40-watt lamp, when the former is the proper size to use. The latter size doubles the cost of the service.

Don't use light-absorbing shades just because they look pretty. Use reflectors made purposely to direct the light as necessary.

Don't use focusing reflectors where a diffusing reflector is proper.

Use small 10-watt lamps for porches, halls, entrances, etc., where a little light is necessary but no great amount of illumination required.

Don't use old carbon lamps just because they are cheap and handy. They are expensive in the end, requiring three times as much current as the new Mazda bulbs and giving a poorer quality of light.

Further particulars may be obtained at the Electric Shop, 307 Grand Avenue.

A politician does not simply order a ham sandwich; he "confers" with the waiter about it.

A little method is worth a great deal of memory.

"Mr. Chairman," said the orator, who had already occupied the platform for twenty minutes amid many interjections from the audience. "Mr. Chairman, may I appeal on a point of order? There is really so much desultory conversation going on in parts of the hall that it is impossible for me to hear a word I am saying."

Voice from the back of the hall—"Don't be down-hearted. You're not missing much."

FRATERNAL ORDERS

(By Harry Edwards.)

The once overs is a popular part of a column in the Call and Post. The following taken from the issue of September 6th, is proof that the author is a fraternalist:

Once Overs.

The man who is worth while is the one who does something for the good of those about him.

He may not have much money, he may not be a leading citizen, he may not be a large contributor to funds which will bring him particular notice. He may be only the plain, every day fellow who, in a quiet way, gives a lift to the one who is a little worse off than he himself.

A man who works for two dollars a day and gives a meal to an unfortunate is entitled to many times more praise than the man worth half a million who gives half of it to some institution in which he is interested. (This, by the way, is an overdrawn illustration, for millionaires are not giving away half of their fortunes.)

The man who treats his family right, pays his debts and is honest in his dealings, is worth an army of those who get money in stealth and give part of it away in public.

You, in your little house on the street which is called Straight, may be laying up treasure where moth and rust do not corrupt, while your acquaintance on Easy street may have nothing with which to meet the final accounting.

A Beautiful Poem.

Fair are the flowers and the children, but their gentle suggestion is fairer; Rare is the roseburst of dawn, but the secret that clasps it is rarer; Sweet the exultance of song, but the strain that precedes it is sweeter; And never was poem yet writ but the meaning outmastered the meter.

Never a daisy that grows, but a mystery guideth the growing; Never a river that flows, but a majestic scepter the flowing; Never Shakespeare that soared, but a stronger than he did enfold him; Nor never a prophet foretells, but a mightier seer hath foretold him.

Back of the canvas that throbs, the painter is hinted and hidden; Into the statue that breathes, the soul of the sculptor is hidden; Under the joy that is felt lie the infinite issues of feeling; Crowning the glory revealed is the glory that crowns the revealing.

Great are the symbols of being, but that which is symbolized is greater; Vast the create and beheld, but vaster the inward creator;

Back of the sound broods the silence; Back of the gift stands the giving; Back of the hand that receives thrill the sensitive nerves of receiving.

Space is as nothing to spirit, the deed is outdone by the doing; The heart of the woer is warm, but warmer the heart of the wooing; And up from the pits where these shiver and up from the lights where those shine.

Twin voices and shadows swim starward, and the essence of life is divine. —Richard Realf.

NEWSPAPER'S SPACE.

Editors are always liberal in regard to writing up local affairs, but their liberality is seldom appreciated. People who go into a grocery store to buy a bill of goods would never think of asking the proprietor to throw in a dollar or two of extra goods as a bonus, but everybody expects the newspaper man to do that very thing, although the space used is his stock in trade and his revenue is derived from it. Of course, local affairs have a certain news value, but when they are given for the purpose of making money for those who put them on, it is no more than fair that the newspaper should receive the same consideration that is given the owner of the building in which the affair is held, or the tradesman from whom something is purchased to be used in the entertainment. However, it appears to be the prevailing idea that newspaper space does not cost anything, and that the editors should give it away to get rid of it and "fill it up." But the fact remains that if the editors did not put some value on their space they would not be editors very long, and there would not be any papers.

COUNTY NOTES

Tax Collector A. McSweeney has employed Mrs. Lila Kirkpatrick to assist with the work in his office for the next three months.

Contractors are hard at work in San Mateo city breaking ground for good streets—$77,000 is to be spent for street improvements.

What will on its completion mean the modernization if the central portion of San Bruno was pressed another step toward its consummation when the town trustees of that place passed resolutions calling for bids for street work that has long been the subject of great speculation. Besides the street work proposal, the proposition of inaugurating a city planning system was given the sanction of the trustees. The bids for the street work will be opened on the evening of September 22d.

This life of ours is a constant series of compromises, of concessions, of surrenders of what we hold dearest and acceptances of what seems second best. That for which we have nobly struggled may fail us and we find what consolation we can among the wreckage of our hopes. We make sacrifices of our desires on the altar of expediency; we pocket our pride in the interest of our purse; we smile over present loss in the hope of future gain. We travel along the line of ambition by slow freight when we had fondly dreamed of whizzing through on the "limited." We surrender at the Waterloo of a hope and bravely look to regaining the next battle. We bow to custom and inwardly rebel at the obeisance. We play at battleaxe between fear of the world on one hand and approval of conscience on the other.—William George Jordan in "Little Problems of Married Life."

Scandal is a strange god and selects strange sacrifices. The obscure are not too low, the prominent not too high, the intermediate not too commonplace. Some may perambulate there with the choice of their hearts, and encounter only tolerant smiles. Others may walk in the twilight. A like conduct will cause one person to be punished, another to be forgiven, and will in another be utterly ignored. It is like a pestilence which attacks or spares equally the man who secludes himself and the one who goes about his daily work.—Alice Duer Miller in "The Blue Arch."

A sorrow in your soul that has changed to sweetness, into indulgence of patient smiles is a sorrow that shall never return without a spiritual ornament; and a fault or defect you have looked in the face can harm you no more, or ever be harmful to others.—Materlink.

Her Leap Year Privilege

"Tum-te-tum, tum-te-tum!"

Angela Winton watched the little fingers wander uncertainly up and down the piano keys.

When the pupil had gone Angela closed the piano with a sigh of relief. Twenty years of teaching music had worn her nerves to a fine edge.

"I wonder if it will always be the same?" she thought as she went to open her letter box. There was a letter.

A little color flashed into her pale cheeks as she read the name in one corner of the business envelope:

JOHN T. CATESBY

Attorney and Counselor at Law

John Catesby was an old friend of Angela's, and she tore open the letter with a feeling of impatience at her swift conclusion that John's unexpected letter was in direct response to her query of the moment before. Very likely it had to do with the bridge club to which they both belonged. The letter read:

Dear Miss Winton—Please call at my office immediately, as I wish to consult with you concerning an important matter of business. Faithfully yours,

JOHN T. CATESBY.

"Dear me! I wonder what he wants to see me about? I may as well dress and go downtown now," she thought as she folded the letter.

An hour later Angela presented herself at Catesby's office. She was a small, timid-looking woman with soft brown eyes and a wealth of glistening brown hair. Twenty years of battling with the world had made Angela bold of heart and unafraid, but the appealing look remained in her eyes.

An office boy took her into John Catesby's private office, and Catesby grasped her little gloved fingers in his large hand and forgot to release them for a moment.

"You wished to see me?" asked Angela, and, thus reminded, he drew forward a chair beside his own.

"Listen to this," he said in an odd tone, picking up an open letter:

Sydney, Australia, Jan. 18, 1915.

Dear Sir—Kindly inform my niece and only relative, Miss Angela Winton, that it is my intention to bequeath my entire fortune of $1,000,000 to her, provided she is married at the time of my death. She is the only old maid in the Winton family, and if she is still unmarried when the announcement of my death is made she will merely receive a small annuity, while the remainder of my estate goes to charity. As I am suffering from an incurable disease, it behooves my niece to hasten to the altar.

JOSEPH HENRY WINTON.

"How utterly absurd!" cried Angela, as rosy blushes invaded her smooth cheeks. "The very idea! He might as well cut me off with an annuity and be done with it!"

Another letter had been received by Catesby on the same subject. The lawyer had been a protege of Winton, who had sent him to school, to college and had paid his way while he studied his profession. Winton never married, and, as stated in his letter, Angela was his only relative. He was very fond of her and had noticed that his protege loved his niece. He was in hopes that the two would make a match. In this event they would inherit his fortune together, and John would make a capital manager of the estate.

Finding that death was not far distant, he had written the two letters, the one intending to influence his niece, the other to advise Catesby of his desire to leave them his property jointly. In the one for John's private reading he had told him that it was his intention to place his niece in a position which would place Catesby in a position to marry her.

"Excuse me just a moment," said Catesby, rising. "I am called away on a matter of business."

He went into the outside office, where a client was waiting for a few words of advice, and Angela was left alone with her startled thoughts.

How glorious to be the owner of a great fortune! What bliss to travel, to have beautiful clothes, to help the needy!

How sordid it was to consider that she must marry and lose her freedom, but who on earth would marry her? Common sense told her that many unscrupulous men would embrace the opportunity to become the husband of an heiress.

From an adjoining office came the lowered voices of two stenographers.

"I saw the letter!" insisted one impatiently. "It said she must marry before he died or she would lose the money! The idea!"

"As if such an old maid could find a husband as quick as a wink!" giggled the other. "Did you ever see such a little brown mouse of a woman?"

"I wonder if she knows it's leap year and she has the privilege of asking some man to marry her? It's her only chance to get the million, believe me!"

When Catesby returned to his desk he found Angela drawing down her veil. Through the filmy meshes her cheeks were pink and her eyes flashed dangerously. All Angela's fighting instincts were aroused. She must have that million at the price of her pride, at any price!

For the time avarice possessed her soul.

"And now, Miss Winton," smiled Catesby ruefully, "let us plan how we can agree to your uncle's eccentric proposition. Of course, you do not want to lose a fortune."

"Of course not," said Angela crisply, "I shall not lose it, Mr. Catesby."

He stared at her.

"You mean that you are going to be married?" he asked.

Angela nodded.

"Then the matter is simplified," he said briskly. "Perhaps you can arrange to be married immediately so as to gain the fortune. You may as well have it."

"Yes," said Angela mechanically.

He opened the door for her.

"You will let me know at once?" he asked in such an altered tone that Angela flashed a glance at him. His face was pale and stern, and the friendly look was gone from his dark blue eyes.

It was almost as if he had guessed Angela's bold intention.

"I've got to—I've got to look out for the future," thought Angela all the way home.

That evening Angela sat and thought and thought of all the men she knew who were eligible. When she had weighed and sifted them and discarded the impossibles and the undesirable there remained but two—Roger Frame and Dr. Deering.

Roger Frame was a civil engineer, or, rather, an uncivil one—brusque and bad mannered, but with a fine, strong character and a good friend.

"And," debated Angela, "it must be desirable to have one's husband a good friend as well."

Dr. Deering was her minister, the middle-aged rector of her church.

"I will explain to them," thought Angela, with hot cheeks. "They will understand, and, as that office girl said, it is leap year. I am only taking advantage of my privilege."

The next morning Angela arrayed herself in her best frock, happily a new soft one of gray with a hat to match. The hat was trimmed with violets, and at her breast she pinned a bunch of the same sweet purple blossoms.

Who could guess the panic in Angela's heart when she stood before Roger Frame's office door? All her principles were in revolt, in arms against the fear that she would lose Uncle Joseph's money.

Facing Roger Frame in his private office, Angela's panic found refuge in hasty speech. Her words tumbled descriptively from her lips.

Roger Frame's rugged face was gravely tender as he took her hands in his.

"You have done me such a great honor, Miss Winton," he said gently, "that I am proud of your confidence in me. But, you see, I've complicated matters by engaging myself to Mrs. Weed, but sit down and let us talk it over."

Angela smiled bravely and shook her head. "I've another name on my list," she said hardily. "The rector." "Dear lady," said Frame earnestly, "I wish you much joy and success in your quest. Dr. Deering is a good fellow, but I'd like to wring your uncle's neck for placing you in such a position."

Angela's lip quivered. "If Mr. Catesby had only thought of some other way out of it," she said pitifully.

"Catesby He's the lawyer in the case?" asked Frame quickly.

She nodded. "You see, I must do something, Mr. Frame," and with one shame look over her shoulder, she slipped out and closed the door upon a very angry man.

Roger Frame jerked the telephone receiver from its hook and called John Catesby's number.

Dr. Deering's reception room was bathed in mellow sunshine when a trim maid ushered an agitated Angela into the room.

"Dr. Deering is engaged at present," said the servant. "He will be at liberty in a little while."

Left alone, Angela could hear the frightened thumping of her heart.

There was the purr of a motorcar outside and the sound was instantly stilled. The rector had another visitor. Angela's courage waned rapidly. She had arisen in a panic when the servant ushered a man into the room with the same explanatory formula.

The man was John T. Catesby.

"Ah!" he cried quickly. "Have you seen him? Am I in time?"

"I haven't seen him yet," admitted Angela faintly.

"Then—then—he stammered excitedly, "why not marry me, Angela? I love you. I want you for my wife."

He held out his hands. Angela placed her trembling hands in his. "If I have to marry any one," she faltered, "I'm so glad it's you."

He drew her closer.

"Suppose your uncle had never written you? Suppose there had been no fortune involved?" he whispered.

"Your love would have been riches enough," said Angela, her face against his and her pretty hat all crooked.

He smiled contentedly.

"Then you may read this," he said, drawing a cablegram from his pocket. "It came half an hour ago."

It was from Sydney, Australia, and dated the day before. It announced the death of Joseph Henry Winton.

Angela would have drawn away from his arms, but he held her closely.

"And you come to me after that?" she asked.

"Didn't I say I loved you?" he replied gruffly. "I've been screwing up my courage to tell you. Your becoming an heiress was a dash of cold water."

"But what shall we say to Dr. Deering?" questioned Angela.

"Why, we'll ask him to officiate at our wedding next week!" was Catesby's brilliant suggestion.—By Clarissa Mackie.

GUINEA EGGS CUT FROM SNAKE HATCHED

Hiawatha (Kan.)—George Evans, living north of here, has a flock of nine guinea hens with a history. Some time ago a snake was discovered in the vicinity of a nest that had contained nine guinea eggs. It made little progress in its attempts to escape, and, after Evans had killed it, he noticed nine protuberances along its body. Post-mortem examination showed where the nine guinea eggs had gone. The eggs were set under a hen, all of them hatched and to-day Evans has the flock of nine guinea hens as proof of the story.

SIX AMERICANS ARE FLYING FOR FRANCE

The presence in Paris of five out of the six American aviators in the French army has given the correspondent, says the New York Sun, an opportunity of investigating what they have been doing at the front.

The names of the six American aviators are William Thaw, second lieutenant; Norman Prince and Elton Cowdin, corporals; J. J. Bach and W. B. Hall, first class soldiers, and Frazier Curtis, second class soldier. Ruel, the Chicago aviator, is of French parentage and was mobilized, though he was born in the United States. All the Americans accepted for aviation had previous experience, although some of them were not more than pupils without a pilot's license in any country. Prince, Cowdin and Curtis joined the service directly by enlistment at Paris early in March. Thaw, Bach and Hall enlisted in the foreign legion early last autumn and passed the winter in the trenches near Craonne with the second regiment, in which thirty-two Americans are still serving. At present Thaw is flying from Luneville, where he was sent in March. His work is the regulation of artillery fire, reconnaissances of artillery positions and general movements of large bodies of troops. Cowdin and Prince are stationed at Bruay, north of Arras, where they went on June 25th. Hall and Bach will be sent to the front in about a month. Curtis is slightly ill and is resting up.

Thaw has been flying an 80-horsepower Caudron biplane. He will soon get a new double motor 160-horsepower Caudron biplane of 33 metres wing spread. His old machine had been shot to ribbons around Luneville and the authorities are replacing the small by the large Caudrons as fast as the enemy's fire wears out material. Cowdin and Prince are flying 130-horsepower Samson Voisin biplanes.

Hall and Bach are training at Le Bourget on 80-horsepower Nieuport biplanes, the smallest and fastest machines used in the French army. Curtis' last machine for training at the Camp d'Avord was of the same model.

Of the six men Thaw has flown most at the front. He was the first to be decorated as a result of citations in the order of the day and the first to receive a commission. Prince and Cowdin are both experienced flyers. Bach is an engineer who studied at Paris after finishing in America. He has lived in France for several years. Immediately before the war he did a considerable amount of work for the French firm of engineers with which he is associated in connection with the manufacture of aeroplanes. He had flown comparatively little, however. Hall had flown considerably in America. He is an engineer also. Curtis had flown for several years. Bach speaks French excellently and Thaw pretty well.

The only indispensable requirement for applicants who desire to enter the French flying corps is real aviation experience. The chance of the promotion of mechanics to pilots is small. It is doubtful that the army will use up all of its experienced pilots before the end of the war.

The aviator's pay as a second class or first class soldier is the regular 1 centime a day, plus 2 francs (40 centimes) a day for flying service. Most of the French aviators are rich young fellows who buy their own expensive uniforms. A corporal aviator gets 4 centimes a day, plus 2 francs, and an adjutant a little more. A second lieutenant receives 600 francs ($120) down and a salary of 657.75 francs a month ($131.55), food and lodging found. Even a crack airman has to count on six or eight months of active service, exclusive of school service, before he can get a commission.

The work takes about ten hours a day, four in training and perhaps five or six on the front. The aviator flies all of the time, in any weather. The number of ordinary aviation accidents has been very small and the number of men brought down by shell fire has not been very large.

Where She Drew the Line.

The maid of all work in the service of a provincial family, the members whereof are not on the most amiable terms, recently tendered her resignation, much to the distress of the lady of the house.

"So you are going to leave us?" asked the mistress sadly. "What's the matter, Mary? Haven't we always treated you like one of the family?"

"Yis, mum," said Mary, "an' I've shstoed it as long as I'm going to!"

HANGS TO FLYER 2600 FEET IN AIR

A French aviator writes from the eastern campaign:

"I have succeeded in making two fine flights at night, profiting by the full moon. The second was especially wonderful. I passed the most terrible minutes of my life as a pilot during it.

"I started at 11 at night with Captain M. as observer officer, carrying four bombs of 90, loaded with mellinite. We were 2500 feet up in seven minutes. Arrived over —. Two Austrian searchlights swept the sky, but failed to reach us as I took a sharp turn each time one approached. We were soon over a barracks, making large circles, and threw our bombs with careful aim. The dull noise of the explosions reached us.

"For the third bomb there was an accident. It caught in the wire joining the landing train to the wheels. We noticed it at once and realized our danger. It was serious, for if we could not dislodge the bomb from where it hung it would touch the ground first as we landed, and as it was prepared for explosion at the first shock it would certainly blow us to pieces.

"We were then at 7500 feet, so we determined to finish our task. We threw our fourth bomb on the stronger of the two searchlights, which went out. Then M. said:

"It's my fault it caught; I'll go and loosen it."

"It was agreed that we should plane down toward our aerodrome and that M. should try to find the bomb when we were about 2600 feet up, so that the abyss below him might appear less profound. The minute came. I lit my pocket electric lamp and looked at the height register. It marked 800 metres (2600 feet).

"M. hoisted himself on the gasoline reservoir, slid between the wires and crawled to the left to the very end of the lower plane. Then, although an ice cold wind was blowing strongly, he got on his knees, hung on by one hand, and leaning half his body over space, managed to loosen the bomb, which fell in an empty field. Then

SENRITA MOLINA

A STORY OF THE CUBAN REVOLUTION.

While the revolution that brought independence to Cuba was brewing the government of Spain, through the governor of the island, used every effort to secure the adhesion of prominent Cubans. Among those whom it was deemed desirable to win over was a lawyer named Enrique Fernandez, who was becoming prominent in his profession. One Jose Molina was summoned one day before Captain-General Weyler and ordered either to win Fernandez by argument or bribery or force. Weyler at the time had unlimited power, and his orders were not to be disobeyed.

Molina was an elderly man and the father of a family of children, one of whom, Rosa, was grown. Fernandez was about thirty years old and unmarried. Molina invited Fernandez to his house that he might have an opportunity to persuade him to align himself on the side of the Spanish government. Fernandez accepted the invitation, listened to his host's arguments, but was unconvinced.

Molina noticed that Fernandez cast admiring eyes on Senrita Rosa, and it occurred to him that what he himself could not accomplish by argument his daughter might bring about by persuasion. The father therefore held a private interview with her, at which he said:

"My child, I have been ordered by the captain-general to bring Senor Fernandez to the support of the Spanish cause, either by argument or force. I have tried the former and failed. The latter course remains. I must tell my guest that the Spanish government demands his adhesion or his life. At times a woman may accomplish by persuasion what a man cannot effect by argument. If you could win over Senor Fernandez you might save his life."

"But, father," asked Rosa, "why are you obliged to do this work?"

"General Weyler is an autocrat in Cuba. He may send me to prison or to death, whichever he chooses."

The girl paled. She did not speak for some time. Then she said:

"Do you wish me to win Senor Fernandez's adhesion to the crown by first winning his love?"

"I do not. I would rather suffer than have you do anything dishonorable."

Again there was a silence, at the end of which Rosa threw her arms about her father's neck and assured him that she would do anything honorable to save him from the consequences of failure.

What made this duty odious to Rosa Molina was that she was heart and soul for the cause of Cuba. One morning she sat on the veranda of her home with Fernandez and began to reason with him why he should embrace the cause of Spain. He listened to her while she spoke hesitatingly and without animation, and when she came to a halt he said:

"Tell me the truth. Your heart is not with Spain; it is with Cuba. There is some reason why you are endeavoring to win me to a cause with which you do not sympathize yourself."

Rosa did not dare tell him what he wished to know. If she should do so he might betake himself beyond her father's reach, and the latter would have to suffer for his failure. She would not tell an untruth. Rising from her seat, she went into the house, leaving Fernandez wondering what all this meant.

Senrita Molina sought her father and told him that she had tried to influence Fernandez, but had failed because she was unfitted to plead a cause to which she was bitterly opposed. Molina sighed, but the sigh was his only reply. Rosa was much troubled. She asked him many questions. If he reported a failure to the governor would he be imprisoned? What would be her next move in respect to Fernandez? What did General Weyler mean by using force to secure the latter's adhesion? She received no reply. Whether her father was himself uncertain in regard to these matters she did not know. The only information she received was that either her father or Fernandez must suffer.

Rosa left her father to shut herself up in her room that she might form some plan of action. Would it not be best for her to tell Fernandez of the situation and trust to him to find some way to save her father? This would be trusting too much to a man whom she had known but a short while. If he should take himself off to the revolutionists Rosa would feel that she had betrayed her father.

Fernandez, who suspected the source of this pressure which had been brought to bear upon him, would have departed had he not been interested in these persons who he believed were made the unwilling tools of the Spanish government. More than this, he was powerfully drawn toward Rosa. It occurred to him to pretend to be uncertain as to which cause he would espouse in order that he might gain time for observation in the hope that he would be able to solve the mystery. So long as there was any hope of a willing surrender there was no reason to use force, and day after day passed with no change in the situation.

Meanwhile the attorney was falling in love with Rosa Molina. Nevertheless he could see no evidence that she regarded him in the same light. For some reason unknown to him she seemed to look upon him with a sort of dread. One day he said to her: "Senrita, you and your father have some interest in wishing me to support the Spanish government. To convince you that you can safely confide in me I will tell you something which you do not suspect. I love you. Tell me the source of your efforts to convert me to a cause that you do not approve. I swear to you not only on the honor of a gentleman, but as one who loves you, that I will not betray you; that if either you or your father or I must suffer it shall be I."

Rosa at this avowal gave a quick gasp, and an expression of pain crossed her face.

"You have only added to the complication that besets us all," she said. "If I could assure you that your love was returned it might simplify matters, for we might then come to a mutual understanding. As it is, to tell you what threatens us would be to invite a sacrifice on your part without being able to reward you for making it. If you have seen anything in me to warrant your avowal you have been mistaken."

"I have seen nothing to warrant an avowal, and I am not surprised to receive an unfavorable response. I have made my confession that you may understand that you have nothing to fear from me—that my life is at your service."

Naturally these words had a powerful effect upon Rosa Molina. She fixed her gaze on the speaker with an expression that it was difficult for him to interpret. It seemed to be a mingling of awe and reverence. But there was no love in it. After thus looking intently at him for a few moments she said:

"Leave me to think over all this. So many strange things have followed upon one another so closely that I am bewildered."

Meanwhile Senor Molina was acting irrespectively of anything that was taking place between these two. Weyler had become impatient and given him a definite and imperative order. One morning Molina summoned Fernandez into his private room and said to him:

"Senor, the government demands your influence and your efforts to assist in putting down this rebellion against the authority of the king of Spain."

"And what if I refuse?"

"You will pass into the hands of the governor-general. I cannot answer for your life."

"You can answer for my death. Those who go into General Weyler's parlors never come out. You have my reply. Long live Cuba and Cuban independence!"

With this Fernandez turned to leave the apartment. Molina stopped him.

"You cannot leave this house."

"Why not?"

"It is surrounded by Spanish soldiers."

Fernandez paused. He had been hasty in giving a definite answer.

"Am I to be taken from her immediately?" he asked.

"Unless you recall your reply."

"Give me time."

"My instructions are to require an answer within twenty-four hours."

"Very well. Before to-morrow noon I will choose between life for Spain and death for Cuba."

* * * * *

The Spanish fleet had been destroyed. Santiago had fallen. Cuban independence had been achieved. Sufficient time had elapsed for the Pearl of the Antilles to become the pearl of her own people. Enrique Fernandez was now a judge on the bench. Quite often it was his duty to pass upon a matter arising from the antagonism existing between Cuban liberators and Spanish adherents during the revolution. A man whose hair was prematurely white was brought before the judge on a charge of having legally executed a man by the order of the king of Spain. The culprit was supported by his daughter, who was doing all in her power to encourage him.

"Jose Molina," said the judge, "do you remember me?"

"I do."

"When last we met you demanded my support of the Spanish cause or my life. I was given a day in which to arrive at a final decision. The decision was not given, for that night I escaped from your house. You were only partly to blame for these acts of tyranny, for you were the unwilling tool of the tyrant. You gave me my choice between Spain and death, and yet I am under a great obligation to you, not to you directly, but through a member of your family."

The prisoner stood waiting for the judge to explain.

"It is to your daughter that you owe the life that I am about to give you, for it was she who provided for me the means of escape from your home. What I owe to her I give to you. Go free. We have had enough of these reprisals since the revolution. I will hear no more of them."

Then, turning to Rosa Molina, the judge continued:

"Senrita, I once offered to give my life to solve a problem that distressed you. You repaid me by giving me a freedom which enabled me to fight for Cuba. If I had a hundred lives with which to repay this debt I would give them all to you."

As Senrita Molina led her father out of the courtroom she turned and looked at the judge. What was in that look he understood, for not long afterward when she and her father had returned to her home a wedding was celebrated there, Judge Fernandez being the groom and Senrita Molina the bride.—By Esther Vandever.

BOY SPURNS FATHER FOR STEP-FATHER.

White Plains, Sept. 11.—"I want to live with my father Lee," said William Crossman Mills Lee in court here to-day, when he was asked to choose between his stepfather, T. Frederick Lee of 158 South Broadway, and his father, William Mills Jr. of Venice, Cal.

The boy, who is 14 years old, inherited $1,500,000 from the estate of his mother, Mrs. Georgia Crossman Mills Lee, who died at the Hotel Ansonia, Manhattan, several months ago.

Mrs. Lee divorced William Mills Jr. and married T. Frederick Lee. Mrs. Lee inherited a fortune from her father, William Crossman, a coffee importer of New York City. She left $50,000 to Mr. Lee and named Mr. Lee and his mother, Mrs. Kenyon Lee, as guardians of her son.

The child's father seeks to gain custody of the boy. The child's choice was recently made before Justice Tompkins at the last of several hearings.

Ernest K. Coulter, president of the society for the prevention of cruelty to children, New York, was called as a witness for the Lee side of the case.

Mr. Coulter said that he first met Mrs. Lee in 1908, when both Mrs. Lee and himself were patients in a hospital in New York City. He said that Mrs. Lee told him about her first husband, saying that Mr. Mills had shown little interest in the child. In 1909, when Mrs. Lee was going abroad, Mr. Coulter said she told him that she was leaving the boy with Mr. Lee's mother and was satisfied that he was in good hands.

The child was called as a witness for Mr. Lee. As there were statements that the boy was not well treated by his stepfather and was made to run errands, he was asked how he fared at the Lee home. He said his stepfather treated him very well, and that if he went on an errand it was because he wanted to do it.

"Do you want to live with Mr. Lee and your Grandmother Lee or your uncle, Mr. Grossman, or Mr. Mills, or your grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Mills, in New Rochelle?" asked Mr. Taylor.

"I want to live with my Father Lee and my Grandmother Lee, where I am living now," the boy replied.

He said his mother had impressed on him that he was always to remain with Mr. Lee.

The court reserved decision.

MOTOR TRUCK BUILDING HUGE CALIFORNIA INDUSTRY

California is growing so fast that few people realize the vast importance of what the numerous manufacturing industries really mean to the people of the state.

If, by chance, you were to visit a certain street in the manufacturing district of San Francisco, you would pay no particular attention to a building on which is placed a sign, "motor trucks." Yet, if you were told that within the four walls of this apparently overgrown machine shop there was manufactured and sold motor trucks to the value of $1,000,000 in a single year, you would probably look at your informer with wonder. Yet this is not only so, but there are two other truck manufacturers making and selling trucks to the value of $4,000,000 yearly.

There is no state in the union where motor trucks can be used to greater efficiency than in this state, which accounts, no doubt, for the unusual sale here.

Manufacturers, wholesalers, retailers, laundries, dairies, department stores, in fact every business man who is called on to deliver his products to his customer, can use a motor truck in California to his profit.

No motor truck manufacturer makes every part of the truck he sells. California manufacturers find it better to buy the standard parts, such as motors, bearings, etc., in the east and build a truck here to meet local conditions. The buyer not only secures a truck fitted to his peculiar needs, but is able to secure factory service, obtain extra parts and save huge freight charges when he buys a truck made in California.

At least two-thirds of the money paid for California motor trucks remains within the state—paid out for wages, material and supplies. Hundreds of men are kept busy. Yet if all the money spent for trucks that are manufactured in the east were spent for the California-made power wagon, hundreds of the better class workmen would be attracted to California and these millions would be kept in circulation here.

When you buy your truck, spend your money here so that this money may in turn be spent for the products of your farm, your factory, or your store.

WARNING.

The California fish and game commission will not recognize any receipt for money paid in lieu of any hunting or fishing license.

All persons holding such receipts must procure legal licenses or they will be liable to arrest.

Hunting license act—Section 1. "Every person in the state of California, who hunts, pursues or kills any of the wild birds or animals, excepting predatory birds or animals, without first procuring a license therefor, as provided by this act, is guilty of a misdemeanor."

Anglers' license act—Section 1.

"Every person over the age of eighteen years who, in the state of California, takes, catches, or kills any game fish for any purpose other than for profit, without first procuring a license therefor, as provided in this act, is guilty of a misdemeanor."

Section 431 of the penal code provides:

"Every person who uses or gives any receipt, except that prescribed by law, as evidence of the payment of any poll tax, road tax, or license of any kind, or who receives payment of such tax or license without delivering the receipt prescribed by law, or who inserts the name of more than one person therein, is guilty of a misdemeanor."

ROAD MANAGEMENT.

When a county builds a good road and soon lets it become rutty, washed out or uneven, who or what is principally to blame? As a result of a study of conditions in a number of counties, road specialists of the department are inclined to place the responsibility upon the following defects in road management, some or all of which are found in all counties where good roads are not properly repaired and maintained:

1. County boards, although having full administrative authority, appear not to attach to their official action in road matters the importance or legal effect which it should have.

2. County boards do not generally have sufficient accounting control of road funds to know what is available for any particular project, where funds have been or where existing balances are to be expended.

3. Lack of any systematic practice in handling road funds among most counties makes it very difficult to carry out over even a single year any persistent maintenance policy, because funds officially obligated for maintenance purposes are not protected against sporadic and irregular drafts for miscellaneous purposes. The greatest likelihood consequently exists everywhere that there will be no balance in the maintenance fund in the last half or third of the year, although only a part of the fund allotted may have been spent.

4. Local labor available for maintenance work is made dissatisfied by the constant, unintelligent and unfavorable criticism of those using the road.

5. Maintenance continuing over a period of years—the ultimate indispensable condition of effective maintenance—is jeopardized by the lack of accounting control that will prevent spending next year's current income in this year.

6. The lack of skilled supervision in construction and the effect of this in increasing the cost or in making effective maintenance impossibly expensive is everywhere seen.

7. The county authorities are commonly opposed to following suggestions for maintenance that involve tying up road funds in any way, such as purchasing materials in advance to store along the road for making repairs or maintaining the road surface.—U. S. Dept. Agriculture News Letter.

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE WHY ORDER OF SALE OF REAL ESTATE SHOULD NOT BE MADE.

In the Superior Court in and for the County of San Mateo, State of California.

In the Matter of the Estate of Alma L. Wood, Deceased.—No. 1917.

It appearing to the satisfaction of the Court from the verified petition of E. E. Cunningham, executor of the estate of Alma L. Wood, deceased, on file herein, that it is necessary, in order to pay the debts, expenses, and charges of administration of the estate of said deceased, which have already accrued, and which will or may accrue hereafter during the administration of said estate, to sell the real estate of the real estate of said deceased:

It is ordered by the Court that all persons interested in the estate of said Alma L. Wood, deceased, appear before said Superior Court of the County of San Mateo, State of California, at the Court-room thereof, in said County and State, on the 23d day of September, 1915, at the hour of ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, then and there to show cause, if any they have, why an order, as prayed for in the petition should not be granted to the said executor to sell the real estate of said deceased, in either public or private sale for the purposes public in the petition, as he shall judge to be for the best interests of said estate and of the parties interested therein;

It is further ordered that a copy of this order be published at least once a week for four (4) successive weeks, in "The Enterprise," a newspaper printed and published in said County.

Dated this 20th day of August, 1915.

SUPERIOR COURT NEWS

R. F. Chilcott, inheritance tax appraiser of the estate of Hans L. Kofoed, deceased, has filed his inventory and appraisement. The total value of the estate is placed at $6000. It consists of a parcel of land worth $3000 at South San Francisco and another parcel of land in San Francisco valued at $3000.

Judge Buck has granted an interlocutory decree of divorce to Lucien Peullier from his wife, Leonie Peullier. The defendant was permitted to resume her maiden name of Leonie Martin.

Judge Buck has granted an interlocutory decree of divorce to Mrs. Victoria May Oliver. The Oliver's were married at San Francisco on January 31, 1910. Defendant deserted his wife on June 11, 1914. Mrs. Oliver was permitted to resume her maiden name, Victor Maye Porter.

T. P. Maloney vs. H. L. Williams. Plaintiff given five days to file amended complaint. Defendant given five days to answer complaint.

Joseph T. Kerr vs. Lucy Johnson et al. Judgment ordered for plaintiff quieting title to certain property located in Redwood City, known as the county jail site.

Maria Pizzo vs. J. J. Bettman. Judgment ordered for plaintiff as prayed for.

G. Bandetti vs. J. P. Weller, as administrator. Decree of foreclosure granted and M. Sheehan appointed commissioner to sell property.

Mary L. Timus vs. George T. Rolly. Demurrer withdrawn and defendant given twenty days to answer.

Andrew F. Burke vs. East San Mateo and Co. It appearing to the court that the true Christian name of the defendant, John Doe Doone, is W. K. Boone, therefore on motion of plaintiff it is hereby ordered that plaintiff may insert the name of W. K. Boone in the complaint as one of the defendants in said action. It is further ordered that said W. K. Boone be and is hereby substituted as a defendant in the above-entitled action in the place and stead of John Doe Boone.

Victoria M. Oliver vs. John E. Oliver. Interlocutory decree of divorce granted plaintiff.

Pacific States Savings and Loan Society vs. C. Knor et al. Trial set for September 29th.

Mary Grace De Gear and James A. De Gear have brought an action against George McLellan and Mary Belle McLellan to recover the sum of $1500 for the sale of certain property owned jointly by the parties to the suit. The complaint alleges that the parties owned a large number of horses, cows, pigs, lumber, hay, etc., valued at $4500, that the defendants secured possession of the property in April, 1914, and converted it to their own use and benefit without consulting plaintiffs, who now sue for their one-third interest in the property.

Hulda A. Scott has brought an action against her husband, Walter I. Scott, for an interlocutory decree of divorce on the grounds of desertion. The couple were married in Klamath Falls, Oregon, on December 31, 1899. There are two children, Walter L. Scott Jr., aged 11, and Starr Scott, aged 7 years. The community property consists of the home at Burlingame and household furniture. A house and two lots were deeded to the plaintiff some time ago, which was also community property. The realty is heavily mortgaged, so the equity of the plaintiff is very small.

Lillian Hadduck has brought an action for an interlocutory decree of divorce against her husband, William E. Hadduck, on the ground of desertion and habitual intemperance. The Hadducks were married in Paris, Riverside county, on October 24, 1905. There is no community property and only one minor child, Ada Hadduck, aged 6 years, as a result of the marriage. Mrs. Hadduck asks for the custody of the little girl. The Hadducks reside in San Mateo.

Antonio S. Goularte of Woodside has filed the last will and testament of his brother, Frank S. Goularte, who died at Pescadero on August 4, 1913. The estate consists of money loaned amounting to $4000 and personal property consisting of cows, horses, etc., valued at $500. The real estate consists of nine acres near Pescadero and a dwelling valued at $3000.

$7000. The deceased left a will bearing date of January 30, 1913, the subscribing witnesses being E. F. Fitzpatrick and Antonio V. Cardoza. Annie Goularte was named executrix but has declined act and has nominated her brother-in-law to act for her. The heirs at law are the widow and three minor children. The petitioner has applied for letters testamentary with the will annexed upon the estate.

Supervisor J. M. Francis has applied for letters of administration, with the will annexed, upon the estate of John J. Hendricks, who died at Halfmoon Bay on July 12, 1915. The estate consists of six acres of land at Halfmoon Bay and a dwelling valued at $2500. The entire value of the estate does not exceed the sum of $3000. The deceased left a will bearing date of July 8, 1905. Mary Joseph Hendricks, wife of he deceased, was named as executrix, but she has declined to act and has nominated the petitioner to act for her. She is aged 80 years and her husband was aged 70 when he executed the will in 1905.

Josephine M. Poket has filed the last will and testament of her husband Israel Poket, who died at Daly City on August 31, 1915. The estate is less than $10,000 in value and consists of money in bank amounting to $600, mortgages and notes worth $1550 and a saloon business at Daly City worth $500. The realty consists of lot 2, block A, Mission Tract, $400. The will was executed on June 9, 1915, the subscribing witnesses being D. E. O'Keefe and James T. O'Keefe. The heirs at law are the petitioner, widow of the deceased, and the following children: Ezra C. Poket, residing in Eden, Wisconsin; Louis Poket, Daly City; Rose Oberson, Annandale, Minnesota; Henry E. Poket, Acampo, San Joaquin county; Lucy Kennedy, San Francisco; Louise Harper, Daly City; Jas. J. Poket, Daly City.

George N. Brewers has filed the last will and testament of Edward Thomas Randall. The instrument was executed on October 3, 1913. The value of the estate is less than $10,000. The entire estate is bequeathed to the sister of the deceased. The provision is made by the deceased that if the sister should die before him the estate is to be divided share and share alike among the following persons: Randall Sylvester, aged 14, Bakersfield; Arthur N. Brewer, aged 16, San Francisco; Edward Baity, aged 10, San Francisco; A. Helen De Roco, aged 6, Oakland.

It all originated at a small grocery store where they sold everything from sand to a pearl necklace. A farmer had gone for some liniment to rub on his cow's bad leg. The bungling grocer gave the old farmer, however, some scent instead of liniment.

The day following the farmer came back in a great rage.

"Look here," he said to the grocer, "I wish you'd be more careful how you chuck things over that counter. You gave me eau de cologne yesterday, instead of liniment, an' I'd put it on the blessed cow afore I knew it." "I hope it hasn't done her any harm," said the grocer, in a mollifying tone.

"Harm be hanged!" snapped the farmer. "That 'ere cow won't eat now, nor allowed herself to be milked. The only thing she does is to sight the whole day long, and go and look at her reflection in the pond." —Worley Gazette.

A "regular" from a western army post came home the other day on an extended furlough. Of course, he was the lion of the hour to his former east side companions.

"Yes," he remarked, cocking his foot comfortably on the rail in front of a Second avenue bar, "the way them Indians love whisky beats anythin' you ever saw. I once met a Cheyenne on his pony. 'Give me a drink of whisky; I'll give you my bridle for it,' says he. 'No,' says I. 'I'll give you my pony,' says he. 'No,' says I. Finally, if you believe it, he offered his bridle and saddle and pony all in a bunch for a drink!"

"Well, and wouldn't you give it to him for all that?" asked one of the crowd.

"Not much. I had only one drink left."

SENSE AND NONSENSE

Conundrums.

What will impress the ear more sharply than a falsetto voice? A false set of teeth.

Why cannot a deaf man be legally convicted? Because it is unlawful to condemn a man without a hearing.

Why is a man who beats his wife like a thoroughbred horse? Because he is a perfect brute?

Epitaphs.

Here lies a man who seemed to think His trouble he could drown in drink. He succeeded.

Sleeping here quite free from strife Is the man who contradicted his wife. She's married again.

A hypnotist below doth lie— He looked a tiger in the eye. No inquest.

Beneath this tree lies Paddy Shea; He yelled, "Hurrah for the A. P. A!" No flowers.

Dear friends, here lies the bones of one Who always carried a loaded gun. The other fellow pulled his first.

This slab in memory of Maid Irene, A stove and a can of gasoline. That's all.

An Immediate Relief.

Young Lady Patient—Doctor, what do you do when you burn your mouth with hot coffee?

Doctor—Swear!

"Why don't you organize with us Turks and Bulgarians and Servians to demand your rights in the United States?"

"I haven't any special rights in the United States," responded the other quietly. "I was born here."

A Sabetha young wife is saying her prayers like this: Now I lay me down to sleep, I want a Ford. I pray the Lord my soul to keep, I want a Ford. If I should die before I wake, a pray the Lord my soul to take to heaven in a Ford."

There are two things in life for which we are never fully prepared, and they are twins.

Matrimony is the neck yoke that makes two collars chafe as one.

"Wait until the evening before judging of the fairness of the day. Wait until the close of life before you paint its gladness or chant its sadness."

A trouble's a ton or a trouble's an ounce,

Or a trouble is what you make it; And it isn't the fact that you're hurt that counts,

But only—how did you take it?

O race of love! we all have run thy happy course, through groves of spring and cared not when at last we lost, for life, or death, or anything.

The only thing that is impossible in this world is that which cannot be imagined.

The secret of power—keep sweet.

Life without real friendship is as a sail without wind.

It is always June where love is, and always morning where she smiles—the morning of creation.

Don't talk about it. One feels the best things without speaking of them.

What thing so good which not some harm may bring? Even to be happy is a dangerous thing.

The devil, who is cunning, took to hating man, but man, who is more cunning still, took to loving woman.

According to the Mosaic account, woman was a sort of a "side-issue."

Life has many experiences for each of us, but a great love is more than an experience—it is an epoch.

Get a hustle on you now. Make a great big solemn vow that you'll win out anyhow—an' keep tryin'.

KITCHEN utensils of almost every nature which appear to have outlived their usefulness can in many cases be mended so as to serve your purposes as well as ever. Not hasty patching, but lasting repairs done by our men. The prices for this work as well as for general plumbing services will be found reasonable.
